THEME OF THE SEMINAR

In this age of information explosion, mass media occupy an important place in our society. The day to day life and events from all around the globe are invariably covered by the mass media, both print and electronic. It is needless to say that the media have a great responsibility with regards to truth and objectivity in presenting news and information. But it is often seen that the media houses are engaged in unhealthy competition with each other in the name of news reporting. We are sometimes fed with sensational and fabricated news; and they seem to cross all limits of ethics. The same is true with a few stories about crimes, which are overdone with unnecessary repetitions. They seem to lack social responsibility and tend to make us immune to the system. Dangerous business practices and cut-throat competitions in the field of media have also affected the fabric of our democracy. In post-liberalization India, transnational media organizations have arrived with their global interest : we often witness big industrial conglomerates threatening the existence of pluralistic viewpoints.

Media, as the Fourth Estate of democracy, should ideally be the agent of social change and watchdog of government activities. They should help educating the masses for their social uplift and also in opinion building. They should give more stress on developmental journalism, not negative journalism. Media should not contribute to mistrust among the masses. But is it always so? In this context, it is pertinent that we consider different aspects and roles of mass media in our society. Such issues and others have encouraged us to organize the national seminar on the topic ‘Mass Media and Society’ in our college. Our objective in organizing the seminar is to elicit responses from students, scholars, media personalities and practicing journalists about the present role and desired role of the mass media. It is also hoped that the research papers and discussions during the two-day seminar will help the mass media organizations and people involved in it find a road-map, which in turn will help build a positively developed society.

ABOUT THE COLLEGE

The Dikhowmukh College nestles snugly in a picturesque and serene campus beside the historic tank ‘Moglow’, reminding one of the glorious saga of Kuranganayani, the Manipuri Princess and wife of Ahom king Rajeshwar Singha. The college got off to a humble start in 1982. The Dikhowmukh College is the only institution of higher education in the vast locality of Dikhowmukh. The historic ‘Bor Ali’ connects this area, once known as Rupahinagar, with the rest of the world. A few kilometers away from the college is Dikhowmukh, or the confluence of the rivers Dikhow, Darika and Gariajan, which is also the seat of the saint Ajan Peer saheb and Ramkha Peeth, one of the holy shrines of ‘Sati’. The scenic beauty of the vast expanse of paddy fields stretching far beyond, migratory birds flocking around the numerous water bodies of the area in winter and the exotic ‘chang ghar’ of the indigenous Mising tribe here would surely give you an out-of-the-world experience

LOCATION OF THE COLLEGE

The Dikhowmukh College is located some 20 km away from the historic town of Sivasagar, and just 5 km from the township of Gaurisagar. Bus, shared auto and tracker service is available from Gaurisagar Tiniali to the College. However, arrangements have been made to guide you to the College at Gaurisagar Tiniali on the first day of the Seminar.

CALL FOR PAPERS

The Seminar is inter-disciplinary in nature and original research papers, either in English or Assamese, of about 2000 words in any of the sub-themes are invited from you.
